Human Resources Development & Personnel Management

Course code: HR57 From: 20-10-2024 Venue: Online - Course Fees: 1250 £

Introduction

HR wants to be relevant by demonstrating that it contributes at all levels. This includes ensuring that the management team's attempts to manage are maintained. Simultaneously, HR must ensure that employees are stimulated, supported, and improved. Only through the management organization can this be obtained.

The outdated approach assumes that HR is obvious and checking, commanding the rest of the organization to follow HR-developed policies. The most recent approach is that HR facilitates and supports the management team in their efforts to increase productivity and commitment.

HR is at the heart of innovation, but it is managed by the management team.

This makes the change more effective and long-lasting. This method, however, necessitates a new type of HR role, as well as new practices and a variety of new skills within the HR team.

This course will give you the confidence to improve a new type of HR function, will show you a new way and will assist you in discovering new methods and skills.

This course will highlight:
